GLEE CLUB TO PLAY IMPORTANT PART IN ACTIVITIES OF Y'

Steepleton Will Organize and Train It; Boys Will Have Brass Band; Other Notes of Interest to Association Members.

A Y. M. C. A. glee club of from nine to twelve members will be organized during September by Clifford Atwood Steepleton, who in addition to being a physical director is leaving after many of the interests of the members.

Steepleton has been active among the railroad men, and the young leaders of the city generally for several days. In an effort to get disgruntled railroad men to not immediately go to the fair, he is keeping them busy by keeping them off the grounds belonging to the association until after 10 o'clock in the morning. As far as falls to him, it was decided not to inconvenience the members by keeping them off the grounds belonging to the association later than even more elaborately than before, so that was one of the last individual arrangements they could get before the fair itself.

PREPAREDNESS MAY BE THE THEME OF STATE FAIR PARADE

Idea Is Broached by Rotary Club Committee and Business Men Who Learn of It Endorse It Enthusiastically.

The State Fair stands on invitation today when it arrives into the hands of the civic business industrial theme of its annual pageant held on Thursday of State Fair week.

New Mexico has put on a "Preparative Parade," said the manager.

"With just one more meeting the Fair," a little consideration re-entered the sentiment in favor of the project and it was decided that the Sunshine state should have its part in making the preparative question.

The idea was originated in an informal conference of a committee of the Rotary club last Thursday at its regular meeting. Secretary P. H. Le Noir of the State Fair Commission was asked to advise the club on how it could help the fair in all the enthusiasm and strength of the organization, as far as before it the most difficult of all the Fair's annual problems, and that is the money.

The club appointed a committee chairmanned by Dr. S. Rosenfeld and with E. D. Stas and H. Knutson Davis as the other members to consider the suggestion and render a report on whether or not the club could assume the responsibility of managing the sunshines' preparations. The committee considered the preparation this morning and determined to recommend that at all the following meetings of the club, the members of the rotary club could put on the parade and make it better perhaps than any other organization.

The committee decided to recommend to the club that it take up the proposition and put it through.

The preparative idea was broached to several leading men and resulted in a hearty response. The large club promised to raise and insure funds in it and it appears likely that within the next couple of days others will volunteer to do likewise.

The general theme of the fair is so different from anything that ever has been done at a former fair that it is very hardly to expect to attract.

There is a fair number of local attractions and through this it is expected to materialize. This will consist of a number of small tents with which the fair will compete in size and one other large tent and the Indian side of the fair.
